Madagascar Forest AdventuresJoin us for an important research study.

The Madagascan forest has both biodiversity and a local population. Madagascar Forest Adventures (MFA) works with local communities to combine scientific research with conservation to build knowledge and increase tourism in the area.

Currently, MFA is collecting data about the behaviour and habitats of many different species. The data will be used to help the local community manage the forests and protect the wildlife.

MFA uses volunteers to run regular environmental education classes for tourists and local people.

MFA offers trips for tourists that include:

- a chance to contribute to genuine scientific research
- the opportunity to study Madagascan culture
- assistance from professional guides
- the opportunity to learn the local language
- all food and accommodation
- a proper adventure!
