Many years ago, people used to see a lot of shepherds with their sheep. Sheep were first raised for agricultural purposes. Now they are used for their wool, meat and milk.

For my university degree, I have to collect data about pastures and the welfare of sheep. It is very interesting to learn about the methods of keeping them. When I arrived at the farm, the shepherd passionately shared all the necessary information. The lambs are kept in an enclosure where they have a basin of water on one side for when they are thirsty and straw on the other side when they are hungry. I then wandered towards the pasture. It took me about three hours to walk around it and inspect every little thing that I noticed. I can actually say that the scene of the green grass with the beautiful valley spread out below and surrounded by high mountains looked wonderful.

I congratulated the shepherd for the care he provides for his animals and promised to send him a copy of my report. I would highly recommend that parents educate their children about the wonders of animals and nature.
